Higher Education Campus Ribbon Cutting Scheduled

Temple College and Texas State Technical College establishing presence in Hutto

Temple College and Texas State Technical College will be offering classes in Fall of 2011 in Hutto, Texas. Though the planned higher education facility that will be located off of SH130 on a 57-acre campus will not open until 2013, Temple College and Texas State Technical College will be utilizing Hutto ISD's vacated Veteran's Hill Elementary School to start establishing a solid student base and begin aiding residents pursuing higher education.

Ribbon Cutting for the temporary campus is scheduled to be held August 10, 2011, at 11am at Veteran's Hill Elementary. Higher education officials have signed a lease agreement for Veteran's Hill for two years while the permanent campus is being built.

Veteran's Hill is located at 555 Limmer Loop, Round Rock, Texas.

two-year and four-year colleges when it comes to conferring the most associate degrees in the critical category of Engineering Technologies and Engineering-Related Fields.

Community College Week magazine has released its latest analysis of the country's Top 100 Associate Degree Producers, arguably one of the most important indicators of success for community and technical education institutions. The move to the top slot represents a 40 percent increase in engineering related degree conferrals for TSTC.

"We are pleased TSTC is No. 1 in producing engineering technology graduates," said Dr. Elton E. Stuckly Jr., TSTC Waco president. "Industry leaders have consistently said skilled technicians are in high demand in today's increasingly complex workforce. TSTC works hard to ensure our graduates meet this demand, so it's nice to be recognized for fulfilling that need."

In addition to ranking top in the nation in Engineering Technologies, TSTC also was top in Texas -and second in the nation - in the Computer and Information Science and Support Services category, and top in the state in the Precision Production category.

The annual report lists associate degree and certificate conferrals for the 2009-2010 academic year, the latest year for which data is available. It includes an analysis of 1,200 two- and four-year public, private and proprietary schools to produce the top 100 list. Data is collected and analyzed from the National Center for Education Statistics through the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data Set completion survey. Since the survey's inception, TSTC has ranked top in the state numerous times and has stayed consistently on the top 50 list in nearly every category for which it is eligible.

Community College Week has a readership of more than 30,000 and is distributed to college employees, students, professional associations, business and industry executives, federal, state and local government officials and others. The rankings are one way the magazine recognizes the efforts of hundreds of thousands of faculty, staff and administrators who dedicate themselves to educating students.
